Former Alphabet HR Leader brings over twenty years of experience to lead company's global people and culture strategy

BOSTON, May 05, 2021 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Flywire Corporation (Flywire), a global payments enablement and software company, today announced the addition of Gary Cunningham as Chief People Officer, effective immediately. In the role, Cunningham will oversee the company's global people and culture functions, including talent acquisition, learning and development, people operations, employee experience and wellness.

"The growth and development of our global FlyMates (employees), and our culture continue to be one of our most important initiatives at Flywire," said Mike Massaro, CEO of Flywire. "Gary brings proven experience in cultivating and developing talent and building thriving, diverse and inclusive cultures. We are thrilled to have Gary join us as Chief People Officer"

Cunningham brings over twenty years of leadership experience in employee development and human resources related functions, including most recently at Waymo (an Alphabet subsidiary), where he led people and recruiting operations. Prior to Waymo, he spent over eight years at Oerlikon, a global engineering and manufacturing organization. There, he was Vice President & Global Head of HR for one of Oerlikon's largest divisions, where he led diversity, equity, inclusion and culture initiatives, talent acquisition and management, performance management, international merger and acquisitions, and employee integration. In his time at Oerlikon, he led the global HR transformation and employee integration strategy for one of the firm's largest acquisitions.

In addition to his professional roles, Gary has served on the Board of Directors and held various membership roles at organizations including Affinity Insurance, the AIDS Foundation of Chicago, Society of Human Resource Management, and the Human Rights Campaign.

"It's such an exciting time to be joining Flywire," said Cunningham. "From my first meeting with Flywire, it was so apparent that this was a company that celebrates authenticity and truly upholds its values. Mike, the executive team and all of the global FlyMates have created an incredible culture and I am looking forward to being part of this journey."
